Angles Way Oulton Broad

Enjoy the stunning Broads National Park on foot on the Angles Way from Oulton Broad, taking advantage of the many river-based activities on the River Waveney. Following the snaking river on the longest riverside section of the footpath, there are many spots along the path to pitch a picnic alongside the willow trees and reed beds.

From a short loop to a long stretch for serious hikers, any explorer can make it their own.

About Angles Way

Snaking across 93 miles of open country, following the River Waveney for much of its route, the Angles Way walking trail is a must-do for everyone who loves the great outdoors. Rich in biodiversity, its many sights are a pleasure to behold come rain or shine. Whether you are looking to tackle the whole of the 93 miles, a five mile stroll on a Sunday afternoon or just one of the many short loops along the way, there's something for everyone.

Thanks to funding in 2012, from the Rural Development Programme for England (RDPE), plans for greater accessibility and improved trail quality have been put in place. These include improved signage, stile-free trail sections and an all-new website packed with updated news and information (visit angles-way.co.uk)

What to see on the trail

Oulton Broad is a large stretch of inland water perfectly suited to a wide variety of water sport activities. Supervised or unsupervised sailing, canoeing, rowing and boating are all offered at the Water Sports Centre. Grab some oars and look out for otters and grey herons as you sidle close to the reed beds!

Lying at the southern tip of the broads, Carlton Marshes' 120 acres of beautiful grazing marsh, fen land and peat pools are bedecked with flowers and, in the summer months, grazed by cattle and teeming with marshland birds and birds of prey including the hobby and marsh harrier. Spot the shy water vole and rare water soldier among the open water pools and reed and sedge beds.

Top 5 sights on this trail:

- 01 The beautiful Broads, a member of the National Park family.
- 02 Mutford Lock - the only operational lock left on the Broads.
- 03 Enjoy picnics and play-areas at Nicholas Everett Park
- 04 Carleton Marshes' 120 acres of wildlife reserve.
- 05 Take the ferry to reach the Waveney River Centre.

Joining the Angles Way at Oulton Broad is made easy by great transport links via train and bus. With no stiles between Oulton Broad and Great Yarmouth there is also a section of the path that is accessible for users of all-terrain wheelchairs.

The whole trail covers 93 miles!
