1. Introduction

The purpose of a health and safety management system is to enable an organisation to understand and control its health and safety risks in a proportionate and sensible way ensuring resources are in place to secure improvements in the areas they are needed most. It enables the organisation to assure itself of its conformance with its stated policy and to demonstrate such conformance to others. The system also assists the organisation in meeting its legal obligations. The overall health and safety management approach adopted by NCC is in line with the health and safety management model described in the Health and Safety Executive's microsite Managing for Health and Safety and HSG65.

NCC's Health and Safety Policy Statement 'Our Commitments' establishes the overall commitment and principles relating to health, safety and well-being management; it demonstrates a formal and public commitment to good health, safety and well-being management.

The policy statement is reviewed every two years by the Head of Health, Safety and Well-being. Any revisions are agreed with Unions before being authorised by Chief Officers and signed by the Chief Executive and Leader of the Council.

The Policy Statement is supported by this document which addresses the way in which NCC is organised to comply with the HSE management model.

Information and guidance documents to support the model are published on myNet and relevant documents are also hosted on InfoSpace. Each site contains documents that set out NCC expectations and levels of mandatory compliance known as 'compliance codes', as well as other documents which have a guidance status to help employees / staff on how to comply with their responsibilities. All published documents provide advice and guidance on how to achieve safe systems of work, considering legislation, enforcement agencies/industry best practice, case law, incidents and our expectations.

The majority of these documents are owned and reviewed by the Health, Safety and Well-being Team and they apply to all areas of NCC business. However, there are a small number of service-owned policies and procedures that are published on various departmental intranet pages or available on departmental systems as they relate to very specific service issues. These are owned by named managers within that service and it is their responsibility to ensure these are reviewed and kept up to date as appropriate.

Where this is the case, the owners are expected to involve the expert advice from the NCC Health, Safety and Well-being Team.

Local procedures and work instructions are also produced and owned by teams and services. These describe the local arrangements for that area of NCC for managing specific tasks or activities, in line with overall compliance codes.

2. Organisational responsibilities

NCC recognises that overall responsibility for health and safety lies with all levels of management having direct responsibility for activities, employees and commissioned and contracted services under their control. However, all employees have a legal and moral responsibility to take reasonable care for the health and safety of themselves and for those other persons who may be affected by their acts or omissions.

NCC, through the Leader of the Council and the Chief Executive, has overall responsibility for NCC's Health and Safety Policy 'Our Commitments P611a.

3. Management responsibilities

Chief Executive

As the Head of paid staff, the Chief Executive has overall responsibility for health, safety and well-being at NCC. They are responsible for ensuring:

- the Health and Safety Policy 'Our Commitments' and the health and safety management system is properly implemented and adhered to across the organisation
- the effectiveness of the health and safety organisation and arrangements
- the provision of appropriate resources to enable persons with specific responsibilities to perform their duties effectively
- an appropriate plan is in place to deal with identified risks and issues and to improve the health, safety and well-being performance of NCC

3.1 Executive Directors and their direct reports

Have responsibility for ensuring that suitable and adequate organisation and arrangements are in place for the management and control of health, safety and well-being within their directorates. They must ensure that:

- the Council's health and safety policy and procedures are implemented within their areas of responsibility
- effective directorate/service policies and procedures are developed and implemented for specific service-related areas of risk, along with detailed work instructions where necessary
- a positive health, safety and well-being culture is actively demonstrated and promoted through good leadership within their areas of responsibility, including a commitment to continuous improvement

- they and their management teams understand and are competent to carry out their duties for health, safety and well-being
- adequate budgetary provision is made to meet the cost of fulfilling the directorate's responsibilities in relation to health, safety and well-being
- adequate time and resources are given to managers and employees to fulfil their roles as defined by this policy
- there are adequate and effective arrangements in place for consulting all employees and their representative trade unions within their areas of responsibility on matters that affect their health and safety
- a risk profile of the service activities (including commissioned and partner led activities) is undertaken to establish the level of management and monitoring required which:
 - have systems in place for active and reactive monitoring of health and safety within their areas of responsibility, including setting targets for improvement and reviewing performance; and
 - where Directorates/Departments work with partnership organisations, or they commission or contract the provision of services on behalf of NCC, suitable health and safety arrangements are established and monitored
 - ensure that the management of health, safety and well-being in their service area considers the needs of anyone with a protected characteristic under the Equalities Act

3.2 Managers

Managers will be responsible for all employees and activities under their control and will ensure that the requirements of relevant safety policies and procedures are complied with. They will:

- ensure that risk assessments are undertaken as appropriate by persons competent to do so and that adequate control measures are taken on a risk basis to reasonably minimise the health and safety risks to their employees and to any other persons who may be affected by the activities
- monitor and review health, safety and well-being performance through:
 - undertaking inspections of the relevant work area/practices under their control setting health, safety and well-being targets and objectives as appropriate through appraisals and other supervisory reviews
 - reviewing incidents and accidents to ensure lessons are learnt and preventative action is taken where necessary
 - monitoring commissioned and contracted work under their control for compliance in accordance with the Commissioning and Procurement compliance code P605

All monitoring activity must be recorded, including issues identified, actions to be taken and by whom.

- develop safe systems of work and procedures and ensure that they are implemented
- set a personal example by including health, safety and well-being management in daily management practice and demonstrating safe personal working practices
- ensure action is taken to resolve any situations that may adversely affect the health and safety of employees or other persons. They will rectify any problem within their own resources or see it is raised with the appropriate Head of Service without delay where they do not have the budgetary or management control to do so.

- ensure that they personally undertake all relevant training and all employees under their control are given adequate information, instruction, training and supervision to carry out their duties safely, paying particular attention to new/inexperienced employees and trainees
- ensure that all plant and work equipment provided is selected through a risk assessment process, suitable, properly maintained and subject to all necessary tests and examinations
- ensure that accidents and incidents (including near misses and incidents of abusive and violent behaviour, and incidents that may relate to protected characteristics as defined in the Equality Act 2010) are properly reported, processed, and investigated by competent persons and the findings acted upon without delay
- ensure that employees and their trade union representatives are consulted on matters of health and safety that affect them
- ensure information that may assist safety representatives in their role is provided to them as necessary
- work with premises managers to ensure premises issues affecting their employees are adequately managed and communicated
- when commissioning work through partners and contractors, ensure that they are selected and managed in accordance with statutory requirements and Council Policy
- ensure that the management of health, safety and well-being in their area of control considers the needs of anyone with a protected characteristic under the Equalities Act
- ensure that they seek timely assistance and advice where expert help is required from the Health, safety and well-being team

3.3 Premises managers

Premises managers are those persons who have delegated responsibility for ensuring the safety of a premise, occupied by the Council, e.g., in libraries or museums or in NCC schools.

Maintenance and security of premises supported by Total Facilities Management (TFM) arrangements are the responsibility of the Corporate Property Team (CPT).

In some premises there will be specific designated roles with premises management responsibilities written into the job description and identified to the individual; in others and particularly in corporate offices there will not. In these cases, the most senior officer based at the premises is responsible for ensuring it is appropriately managed by nominated person(s). The premise manager should be identified at each site and any delegated responsibilities clearly identified.

The exception to this is County Hall, where the Corporate Property Team assumes the role of Premises Manager.

Managers will ensure that those with an identified specific responsibility, attend training relevant to their role as described in the appendix to the Mandatory training policy P505.

Note - Some premises management duties are the responsibility of CPT while others are the responsibility of the premises manager for the site. These duties may be split, and more information can be found in Appendix 1 - NCC properties supported by TFM.

3.4 Commissioners, project, and contract managers

All employees that have a role in managing projects or contracts must ensure they follow policies and procedures relating to this area on myNet and in particular:

- all relevant health and safety requirements are included in contracts
- the Health, safety and well-being team are consulted in a timely way regarding the development of new contracts
- appropriate levels of monitoring are set up for contracts to ensure organisations are delivering to the agreed health and safety standards. This must include monitoring by the Health safety and well-being team where appropriate.

They attend all relevant training relating to their role, as described in the appendix to the Mandatory training policy P505.

3.5 General employee responsibilities

All employees have individual responsibility to take reasonable care for the health and safety of themselves and for those other persons who may be affected by their acts or omissions. Employees must:

- always comply with the Council's Health and Safety Policy and procedures
- co-operate with their management in complying with relevant health and safety safe systems of work and procedure
- use all work equipment and substances in accordance with the instruction and training received
- wear, use, store, maintain and replace personal protective equipment as appropriate
- not intentionally misuse anything provided in the interests of health and safety
- take part in and contribute to health and safety inspections, risk assessments etc. as appropriate
- report all accidents (personal injury and vehicle), ill-health, incidents of violence and aggression, near misses, hazardous situations, general health and safety concerns, defective equipment or premises in line with Accident reporting and investigation – compliance code P601
- attend all training relevant to their role

3.6 Head of health, safety and wellbeing, Health and safety manager, Well-being manager

The Head of health, safety and well-being has overall responsibility for, (and is supported by the Health and safety manager, and the Wellbeing manager), the development, maintenance and improvement of the health and safety management system for NCC including:

- setting the strategic direction for health, safety and well-being matters
- ensuring that NCC's health and safety policy document 'Our Commitments' remains valid, is reviewed every two years and is effectively implemented
- ensuring that adequate arrangements and resources are in place to:
 - develop, review, and publish health, safety and well-being policies, compliance codes and associated documents to ensure they remain valid and strive for continuous improvement
 - provide focussed operational support to NCC managers and employees regarding key risk activities
 - provide competent advice and guidance about health, safety and well-being

- monitor, benchmark, and review NCC’s health and safety performance against the published policies and procedures, including undertaking proactive premises and activity monitoring, and reactive incident investigation
- reporting to the Chief Executive, Executive Directors, Members, Directorate Management Teams, and any other appropriate body, on matters relating to health, safety and well-being, including the provision of management information to support improvement within services and across NCC
- establish an annual improvement plan for the management of health, safety and well-being for adoption and agreement by the Executive Directors and Members
- developing and maintaining a health and safety training strategy and providing appropriate training services

4. Employee consultation / safety representatives

Consulting employees on health, safety and wellbeing (HSW) matters is very important in creating and maintaining a safe and healthy working environment. It also helps in motivating staff and making them aware of health, safety, and wellbeing issues.

Trade union safety representatives represent employees in day-to-day consultation with management on issues of HSW. Such representatives are recognised by NCC as having an important role in achieving employee involvement and in creating and sustaining a positive HSW culture.

By mutual agreement between the Council and the appropriate Trade unions, safety representatives will represent both union and non-union employees in particular work areas. Non-union employees may also be consulted directly.

Safety representatives should be consulted in a timely fashion where possible on all matters of HSW that may materially affect employees and on the provision of HSW information and training.

Before making decisions that could have HSW consequences for employees, managers should inform safety representative about their proposed course of action and give them an opportunity to express their views.

The functions of safety representatives and further detail regarding consultation is provided in the Safety representatives and committees agreement P626.
